Mr. Bowers next asked the witness:

"Did you obtain any card or ticket of any kind at the Gansevoort Club"."

"Yo this there was instant objection on the part of Mr. Scheuerman, counsel for McAvoy."

be regarded as competent testimony.

Ruling of the Court.

The argument finally drifted down to the question of the specific imputations contained in The World's articles. Justice Dugro held that the article concerning the removal of ashes from a police station to the baseball grounds in police patrol wagons and under police escort contained no imputation upon which a suit for libel could be maintained, since in no portion of the article was it stated that this removal of ashes in police patrol wagons had ever been ordered by Mr. McAvoy or that Mr. McAvoy had ever instructed members c. the Police Department to make this disposition of ashes from police stations.

Justice Dugro also gave his opinion that there was no imputation on which a suit for libel could be based on the statement made by The World following its investigations that there was a belief that McAvoy would resign his position in the Police Department.

Mr. Scheuerman, for McAvoy, argued that the statement concerning McAvoy's rumored possible resignation contained the imputation that he was going to resign because of the article contained in The World, that his associations were with gumblers and poelroom keepers and that he could not afford to suppress them.

Not an Imputation, Says Court.

Not an Imputation, Says Court.

Justice Dugro said that he could not regard the statement that Mr. McAvoy was likely to resign because he did not want to lose the political adherence of centain men in Harlem who were pool-room keepers as being an imputation. A gambler, said Justice Dugro, had equal political rights with other citizens and it was no reflection upon any man that in the case of a political election he should desire the support and votes of the gambling fraternity. Many reputable citizens, remarked Justice Dugro, sought such assistance, and it was not considered discreditable. Therefore he could not see that the statement made by the World that there was a belief that McAvoy would resign rather than lose the political adherents of his friends who conducted pool-rooms contained an imputation.

The allegation that Mr. McAvoy had falled to close pool-rooms, continued Justice Dugro, would not be an imputation of improper conduct, but might show some omission on his part to close the p. shrooms.

"There is a statement," continued Justice Dugro, "in the fourth cause of action, Under his reign Harlem is wide open. That, I take it, would be claimed to be an imputation that under his reign Harlem was allowed to be wide open. I take it that it meant that pool-rooms, gambling-houses and such resorts were there in violation of law.

"If that involves the imputation that nool-rooms were allowed to be open in Not an Imputation, Says Court.

Q. Then you went to inother place?

A Yes, to No. 304 West One Hundred and Twenty-sixth street.

Q. Was it the same day? A. On this faiurday at 2 o'clock, before going to the Gansevoort Club, I was introduced to Mr. Samuel Alexander.

Q. Did you know Alexander before that? A. No.

Q. You went to No. 304 West One Hundred and Twenty-sixth street? A. Yes, s'anding in the areaway at No. 304 West One Hundred and Twenty-sixth street I again met Alexander, and the rave me a card on which a slip was marked: "304 West One Hundred and Twenty-sixth street, O. Mr. Waugh identified reproduction of both cards in The World.

Q. What sort of a building was this?

It was either a three or four story rown-stone house. We were taken upfairs by Alexander to a room in the par of the parior floor. I found eight ten men there. I found one man

Henry Proctor Waugh, a reporter of The World for the past eight years,
told of being assigned to go to Hariem in the month of February, 1904, for the purpose of ascertaining whether any pool-rooms were being conducted in that past of the city and of having been directed by a bartender to a place is West One Hundred and Twenty-scond

"What next did you do? A. On Feb. 15 1 visited the saloon of John R.
Cooper, at the southweat corner of One Elgith avenue. I went into the bar elemand had a conversation with a name and had a conversation with a

to that name and had a conversation with in.
There were several and the wait
the saloon in the base of the with him. I then went to a room upstairs. Troy opens a door and had some beer and were introduced to several men. In reference to the two men on the outside, we inquired as to who they were."

Mr. Waugh on objection of McAvoy's counsel was not permitted to disclose what was told him.

Went to Another Pool-Room.

Q. Did you go to any other pool-room that day? A. I did. I went to No. 304
West One Hundred and Twenty-sixth street, just west of Eighth avenue.

Mr. Bowers next asked the witness:

"Did you obtain any card or ticket of avenue, a reporter, told of relinquishing in the street of the service of the service of the service."

Damiel W. Packard, of No. 2184 Fifth avenue, a reporter, told of relinquishing in the service.

Q. Did you see him? A. Yes,
Q. What time of the day did he come?
A. About 2.30 in the afternoon.
Q. You mean in the pool-room proper?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. How long did he remain?
A. About two and a hair minutes.
Q. Did you see him afterward?
A. Yes, in a room in the rear of the saloon.

SPOTTED FEVER.

The Well-Known Dr. J. A. Greene Interviewed.

Having heard of the immense success of Nervura as a great apring remedy, a reporter interviewed Dr. J. A. Greene with the following result:

"What do you think of the prevalent 'spotted fever'."

"That is another name for meningitis. The spinal cord softens, the nerves of the lower limbs become paralysed and high fever follows."

"Are you the Dr. Greene that gives the free public lectures?"

"Yes, in an honest endoavor to promote the health of the community. I deliver each year a course of public medical lectures on physical culture, nerve development, fules of hygiene and the laws of health. I believe it to be a physician's first duty to prevent disease."

"Yes, and I positively know, from extensive practice and wide experience, that my Nervura will prevent most diseases incident to climatic conditions of the spring. Nervura strengthens the nerves. Cleanses the blood, tones up the sluggish stomach and liver and excites the kidneys to healthy and normal action, thus, not only throwing off impurities, but fortifying the system sagainst all spring complaints.

"Nervura is the only proprietary remedy that is compounded and vouched for by a regular practising physician. Not only this, or by mail, entirely free of charge."

Admits the Evidence. "If that involves the imputation that poolrooms were allowed to be open in Harlem through the improper conduct of the plaintiff, then it may be shown that poolrooms were open there, were known to the plaintiff and that if no change was made after the matter had been brought to his knowledge it would be competent to show it. I will permit the evidence to be introduced." Mr. Bowers then asked Mr. Waugh; "Did they have any token of any kind at the Gangevoort Club?" "Yes, I was, on leaving, presented with a card of identification, which would procure me the right of entrance at any future time I might wish to go there. Q. Then you went to snother place? H.O'Neill & Co

American Corsets to the Front.

Years ago H. O'Neill & Co. recognized that in

La Vida

Corsets they were able to offer their customers a garment superior to any imported corset, not only in the advantage of price, but in style, fit and quality as well. That this judgment was well justified is borne out by the fact La Vida Corsets have been introduced with that pre-eminent success in the leading European centres where the absence of import duty places La Vida Corsets on the same footing as Continental goods.

In testimony of this we quote from a recent advertisement of Esslemont & Macintosh, one of the largest drapers in Great Britain, who, in speaking of La Vidas,

"We confess it is hard to find a Corset which meets the exacting requirements of the physician, the hygienist or publications devoted to health matters, but one which has come under our investigation seems to fulfil the demands of a perfect health Corset, Reference is made to the "La Vida." Happily, not only the requirements of physical wellbeing, but likewise those of style, are met and amply catered to in this Corset."

Splendid testimony this from the Old Country as to the superiority of the La Vida Corset.

The new La Vida Corsets for Spring far surpass any previous models. The styles show a marked advance in grace and the intrinsic merit of the workmanship is great-
